I General questions

How do I know which form to use?

First- and Second-Step application forms: Unless otherwise specified, all unsolicited (new, “first-contact”) applications for funding must complete and submit the First-Step Application -- a link to which is available on our website’s “Funding” page (<https://www.kahanefoundation.org/funding/>) during application periods. After the First-Step application form has been submitted, it will be determined if your project should be invited to continue to the Second-Step application form.

Application form for previously funded projects: Organisations with a project which was funded by the Kahane Foundation in the previous funding period that wish to re-apply for funding (for the continuation of the project), must first inform us of their intent to do so. After informing us of the intent to re-apply, it will be determined (based on the submitted Report Form) if the organisation should be allowed to re-apply for funding for the project.

Project Report form: All projects which have been funded are asked to submit a Project Report form approaching the end of the funding period. A link to this form will be sent to active project partners after receiving funding. The Project Report form is a requirement for previously funding projects wishing to re-apply.

My organisation's project is not yet completed, however, we have been asked to complete a Project Report form. How should we proceed?

Our Project Report form can be used as either a Progress Report or a Final Project Report. It depends on if the Project has come to a close, or if it will be continued in the next year. This form is meant to give us brief summary of how the project has developed (or has been developing) as well as insight in how significant an impact our contribution has made (or is making) on the project.

Are there maximum or minimum limits to funding which can be requested?

The Kahane Foundation does not publish any max/min funding sum, as need varies greatly from project to project. The award amount depends on both the project's need and our evaluation.

Are there maximum or minimum limits to the percentage of a project's total budget which can be requested as funding?

The Kahane Foundation does not publish any number in this regard as it varies greatly from project to project. That being said, trends indicate that as the amount of funding requested approaches the total budget of the project, it becomes less likely that the project will be funded by our foundation.

Can an organisation submit more than one application for funding?

Generally, we accept only one application per organisation. This is due to the volume of project applications which we receive, and helps to give all potential projects a "fair chance" at receiving funding. If an organisation has two or more projects in mind, we ask that the organisation apply only for that project which it determines to have the most need/ highest priority.

Can an organisation apply for funding for multiple projects on a single application form?

No. Only one project is allowed per application form.

What is the maximum/minimum duration of a project?

The project itself can run as long as necessary, however, applications should concentrate on the funding period in question (in this case the funding year of 2018).

Northern Africa has different definitions: What Countries does the KF define as Northern Africa?

The African countries included in our definition of "Northern Africa" include Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, Egypt, and Sudan.

II Questions specific to the filling of online forms

Is there a way to temporarily save the application form and continue it later?

Unfortunately, there is currently no way to save your answers on the online form. Applicants are, however, recommended to write the answers in a text editing program (e.g. Microsoft Word) as they go – this ensures not only that answers are not lost in the case that the page is refreshed or closed while the form is being filled out, but also allows applicants to "save" their answers for completion at a later time. Also recommended, is to complete the application with reference to the respective application form walkthrough – a link to which can be found at the top of the respective application form.

As I am filling out the online form, I have noticed that the displayed character limits change. How can I know the actual character limits for the fields?

While the text input fields in online forms do show the correct number of characters which remain, the value shown as the limit, however, can only be considered correct for the ACTIVE field (the field in which you are currently typing). For an overview of all character limits, as well as detailed descriptions to each question, please consult the respective form walkthrough – a link to which can be found at the top of the respective application form.

I have submitted my application, but have realised that I made some minor mistakes, what should I do?

Don't worry. Minor spelling and grammar mistakes will be corrected on our side – we see these as typos – to error is human. If we do not understand something within the application, we will contact you to clarify. In the case that you measure it to be a significant error, you may also submit a second application. Just be sure to write us to let us know that we should ignore the first one.

Don't worry. If we do not understand something within the application, we will contact you to clarify. In the case that you measure the mistakes to be significant, you may also submit a second application. Just be sure to write us to let us know to delete the first one.

I received an error message when I clicked the “submit” button or during the application process, what should I do?

Please write us via our contact form and explain what happened. We will do our best to solve the problem.
